There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the quality of the work environment in the public sector. This is reflected in the fact that the public sector is now a major employer of people with disabilities. The purpose of this study is to investigate the experiences of people with disabilities who work in the public sector. The study is based on a qualitative approach and involves interviews with 10 people with disabilities who work in the public sector. The results of the study show that people with disabilities experience a range of challenges in the workplace, including discrimination, lack of support, and limited opportunities for advancement. However, they also report a range of positive experiences, including a sense of belonging and the opportunity to contribute to the organization. The study highlights the need for the public sector to create a more inclusive and supportive work environment for people with disabilities.
